IMAGERY INTELLIGENCE REPORT

Report number	JIC-IMG-0347
Date	D−8
Sensor	RQ-4B Global Hawk, electro-optical and infrared
Imagery window	Night of D−9 to D−8
Target	Fortune Harbor, roll-on/roll-off berth, and the inland road leaving the port
Rating	B2

1. Key readout. An Asotin-flagged roll-on/roll-off cargo ship berthed at Fortune Harbor overnight. At least 10 large wheeled vehicles were offloaded under tarpaulins. Each is about the size of a heavy truck, with a box-shaped load on the rear deck.

2. Movement. The vehicles formed a single convoy and left the port before dawn, heading inland on the main road toward the interior. Later passes did not reacquire them.

3. Assessment. The vehicles are probably military equipment (moderate confidence). The type is undetermined. The size and the box-shaped loads are consistent with air defense launchers, rocket artillery, or engineering vehicles. We cannot narrow it further from this imagery.

4. Recommendation. Continue coverage of reserve and dispersal areas in Omak's interior.

ELECTRONIC ORDER OF BATTLE (EOB) UPDATE: OMAK

Report number	SIG-EOB-0219
Date	D−5
Collector	RC-135V/W Rivet Joint
Period covered	D−9 to D−5
Rating	A2

1. Summary. Since D−9, collection has detected short-duration emitters in Omak that do not match its known Patriot or early-warning radars. They represent at least two, possibly more, separate emitters. The parameters are consistent with a short-range air defense surveillance radar.

2. Intercepts.

Date	General area	Duration	Remarks
D−9	Outskirts of Omak City (capital)	under 2 min	No repeat from this site
D−8	Interior	under 2 min	No repeat from this site
D−7	Near the coast	under 2 min	Single intercept
D−6	Interior	under 2 min	Different site from D−8

Location accuracy is poor because each emission was short. No emitter has transmitted twice from the same location.

3. Assessment. Omak probably has mobile short-range air defense units that practice strict emission control (moderate confidence). Numbers and locations are unknown.

4. Implications. Low, slow aircraft should expect pop-up threats away from the known Patriot sites.

Poll: Public Split on Omak Action as Legislature Demands a Vote

By the Ledger Politics Desk

CAPITAL CITY — Cosmopolitans are divided over military action in the Strait of Great Fortune, according to a new survey released this morning.

Forty-one percent of respondents support military action to keep the Strait open. Forty-eight percent oppose it, and 11 percent are undecided. Support drops to 29 percent "if Cosmopolis troops are killed."

Opposition leaders in the legislature are demanding a vote before any strikes. "The meddling scandal is the reason we are in this mess," one senior opposition member said. "The government doesn't get to start a war to cover it up."

The crisis is already reaching household budgets. Fuel prices rose 6 percent this week on fears that the Strait could close.

Excerpt.

Interviewer: Will Omak reopen the Strait?

Foreign Minister: Omak has never closed the Strait to peaceful ships. We will guarantee free passage to every honest trader on the day the world recognizes that the Strait's southern shore, and its waters, are Omak's. That is not a concession Cosmopolis can buy along with our elections. We will talk to anyone about the Strait. We will not talk about who governs Omak. Our people decided that in the streets.

Analyst comment. The minister has repeated the "recognize our sovereignty" line in three interviews this week.

Rating	F6

Bottom line. We cannot confirm the claim. The photo shows Asotin transport aircrew, and we have not identified any Asotin combat units in Omak.

Discussion.

1. The photo shows about eight people in Asotin military flight suits beside an Asotin cargo aircraft at the Omak City airport. The flight suits match those worn by Asotin transport aircrew.

2. The image does not show whether these people stayed in Omak or left with the aircraft.

3. No other reporting places Asotin combat units in Omak.
